The First Requirement of the Supreme Garden is A BULB OF SUPREME QUALITY

BELOW—A corner of the Bennington home and a small section of one of the gardens of Margaret Breard Hawks.

It is this soil, carefully analyzed, tested and prepared, which has furnished new standards of bulb and bloom perfection.

THESE are prime considerations that the shrewd purchaser of bulbs will observe:

First—Substantial evidence of superiority over competitors.

Second—Absolute assurance of productive health and vigor.

Third—Fitness for the buyer's soil and climate.

Fourth—Guaranteed freedom from rogues and diseases.

Price, as a consideration, is a grave and expensive mistake barring many growers from success and prestige. Reliance upon lowest quotations to determine where one's orders shall be placed is false and dangerous economy. The saving of absurdly small sums in original purchases has resulted in many grievous disappointments in mediocre if not ruined gardens.

If you would list on paper, carefully and conscientiously, those commercial growers who can, without the slightest question, meet each and every one of the four considerations stated above, then price may safely be made the fifth consideration — and only then. For that one reason, we have asked you to compare our prices with those of other established and reliable growers proved by reputation, exhibition success and reproductive tests in various localities to measure up to your needs.

Unwise selection may be another factor detrimental to happy realization.

Harmonizing color combinations for gardens or for home decoration are most important. We have suggested several very attractive groupings in this folder.

Exhibition value is another urgent point of concern. We have noted several of our most consistent prize winners.

A distressing number of failures have resulted from neglect of the third consideration. Bulbs from one soil and climate often will not reproduce satisfactorily in others. Sickly, stunted gardens are too frequently attributed to wrong reasons when unsuitable stock is the real cause.

Margaret Breard Hawks, a native of Louisiana, had the supporting opinions of soil and seed experts in her choice of Vermont location for her gardens. Even as potato growers in all sections of America demand Vermont seed for best results, so have gladiolus growers throughout the United States and Canada accepted Elmwood Terrace bulbs as the highest type of garden, exhibition and commercial stock producing blooms of superior vigor and beauty in any climate.

When Better Bulbs Are Grown ELMWOOD TERRACE GLADIOLUS GARDENS Will Grow Them

Our Latest Triumph—at the 1923 American Gladiolus Society Show

"THE GARDEN MAGAZINE ACHIEVEMENT MEDAL"

That coveted trophy signifying championship of the year's greatest show with the highest number of points won.
With less than half our exhibits staged, awards to us totaled nearly double those of any other competitor.

Announcement:

We have now in preparation a concise pamphlet of instruction and suggestion for growers of gladioli. This will include a summary of Elmwood Terrace methods, not only in planting, growing and harvesting, but in filing, indexing and handling from the time the bulbs are placed in the ground until they are marketed.

Valuable notes are provided on all cultural, storage, decorative, exhibition and commercial phases of this fascinating occupation. Human interest bits are contained, anecdotes, answers to questions all gladioli growers have asked, highlights of experience since the very beginnings of Elmwood Terrace Gladioli Gardens, comments worthy of attention by every follower of the "Glad Trail."

This pamphlet, "Gladioli Gleanings" by Margaret Beard Hawks, illustrated with photographs and pen and ink sketches, will be available, upon request, with every order of Elmwood Terrace bulbs totaling three dollars or more.

The Sensation of the A. G. S. Show at St. Thomas, Canada

Picturing the glorious Marshal Foch display and its award — The Burpee Silver Trophy to Elmwood Terrace Gardens for "The Finest of All Varieties." A prize winner wherever shown at the leading exhibitions. Declared in Champe's book to be a "wonderful acquisition—the forerunner of a new race of Glads."

ELMWOOD Terrace bulbs are guaranteed true to name and exactly as represented.

Without qualification, we assert them to be just what the awards made by America's foremost judges as recorded on these pages prove them — the best obtainable at any price, ideally adapted for any soil or climate where Gladioli will grow.

Our selections from the creations of the world's greatest hybridizers have received the invariably unanimous approval of connoisseurs. In our soil and climate, and through our own cultural methods, we have strengthened and improved this stock until its supremacy is assured in any competition. The quality of Elmwood Terrace strains cannot be surpassed or duplicated from any other source — strong, healthy, intensely vigorous bulbs producing magnificent blooms of unapproachable perfection.

An Apology—

We had intended, this season, publication of an Elmwood Terrace catalog which would be without more of a rival in its field than are our bulbs in theirs. With the most expensive of paper, color plates and printing, we planned to issue such a catalog as would be appropriate to the superiority attained by Elmwood Terrace Gladioli, and a delight to those who saw its beautiful pages.

But the rush of our planting, cultivating, harvesting and filing delayed us from day to day, and from week to week, until our printers told us that no such catalog could be completed before late February, 1924. Our mail was filled with demands for our price list. We could not wait. This folder—or what our printers call a "broadside" seemed to be the only solution.

Our disappointment is keen, but we have these consolations. Our best offerings are here contained; our stock is just as good as it would have been if advertised in the elaborate publication; our customers can find herein the selection they desire and their gardens will bloom just as perfectly from the stock this folder offers. Anyway, whether from this folder or from the most wonderful catalog we could devise, these are all Elmwood Terrace bulbs, aren't they? And that, after all, is what counts in the Supreme Garden.

Our consistent, sweeping victories at the foremost shows, our perfected cultural methods and ideal soil and climatic conditions assure the continued reign of ELMWOOD TERRACE products as the finest obtainable

Ed. Howe's Gladiolus

Among Letters:

"I've gone clean daft over gladioli, and particularly so since receiving the wonderful box you sent me. I am enclosing my personal check to you in preference to the many other firms who have been very liberal with me." A. J. R. New York grower.

"Your assortment contained some of the choicest colorings I have ever known. The results to us were astounding." From F. W. S., New York landscape architect.

"Isn't it possible to reserve for me 200 to 250 of an assortment such as I had this year? I have not in exhibition or elsewhere, seen anything to equal these flowers." From H. G. H., a New York manufacturer and gladiolus grower.

"Your blooms attracted a great deal of attention and other folks liked them so well that I have sold about all the large bulbs I have. Note me on your highest priced ones per bunch, and the others in lots of 100 to 1,000. Am pleased to note that you captured Kunder's Gold Medal." M. G. E., Oregon grower.

"The blossoms were the largest and best I have seen this year. I will be in the market for a few thousand planting stock this fall." R. L. W., Connecticut grower.

"I have had splendid success with your gladiolus bulbs. They are the best that I received from anywhere." A. A. H., Massachusetts.

"You must always hold over your customers once they find you. I have done this." A. A. H., Virginia.

"I consider that Marshal Foch is one of the finest creations. I will give a high recommendation in the new edition of my book. Please order my order for 100 bulbs." R. M. C., noted author and grower.

Ed. Howe Remarks:

The famous Ed Howe, founder of The Atchison Globe, author of widely read books and "Ed Howe's Monthly," writes in his "Impressions of New England":

"Another impression was that New England is particularly favorable for the production of gladioli. One day we called at a place in Bennington, Vt. Our host said Mrs. Hawks, living next door, was packing an exhibit of gladioli to take to an exhibition in Canada, and that while she was exceedingly busy, possibly we could see it. So we went over and saw a sight I shall long remember; hundreds of gladioli of different colors, and of great size and perfection. I was told that the lady began raising the flowers as an amusement, and had drifted into a very profitable business; that people all over the country sent to her for bulbs; that she has certain varieties as rare as a manuscript by Homer. It seems there are gladioli enthusiasts everywhere; one paid $2,000 for 14 bulbs. A good many of these make journeys to Bennington to see a very remarkable collection. Later I heard of the result of the exhibition in Canada; Mrs. Hawks made 24 entries, and took 24 prizes; I saw the notable collection as one of the brief but delightful incidents of my trip."

DECORATIVE SUGGESTIONS

For good color contrast, try blues with creams and yellows; blues with delicate pinks; delicate pinks with whites or deeper pinks and rose; reds with whites and creams or harmonizing shades of pink.

For highly ornamental baskets, use the lovely Primulini in all their rainbow hues, alone or in combination with other flowers, such as Baby's Breath, Delphinium, Candy Tuft, Phlox, etc.

Last year, at the New England Gladiolus Show, our exhibit of Alice Tiplady and Topaz won first prize for the handsomest basket, the basket being black enameled, and Baby's Breath and asparagus used to complete the beautiful effect.

For porch decoration, use some of the brilliant reds, selecting the cheaper varieties such as Ida Van, Crackerjack, etc., so that they may be used in quantity.

Have you a room with mahogany furniture—possibly with mulberry hangings—where most floral decorations are a problem? Try Rose Ash and Loveliness!
